The Brotherhood Bible Club and Its Leader

MISS SUE TYLER, OF EAST RADFORD, AND A GROUP OF THE BROTHERHOOD BIBLE CLASS.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Radford, Va., June 22.—Few young women in this section of the State have wielded a greater influence for good or have been more successful in ethical leadership than Miss Sue Hampton Tyler, second daughter of Ex-Governor and Mrs. J. Hoge Tyler, of East Radford.

Miss Tyler's work began in a small way ten years ago, when, at the close of her father's administration as Governor, he brought his family from Richmond to their attractive home on the outskirts of East Radford.

At this time she took a class of boys about twelve years old in the Sunday school of Central Presbyterian Church, of which the Tyler family are members, and from her interest in their welfare and her gift of leadership has grown up a great work.

It was not enough that they attend Sunday school regularly and have perfect lessons. Her love for them and her desire to help them grow into clean, honorable, Christian men caused her to reach out into their everyday life and strive to help them resist the temptations that beset young boys in a railroad town, where at that time saloons abounded and where existed influences of downward rather than uplifting tendency.

She entered into all of their interests and plans, and soon was the adored leader of "The Boys' Christian Band," as they styled themselves, always planning for their pleasure as well as for their improvement in morals, manners and ideals.

And so her influence grew and widened, playing a large part in keeping the feet of her young band in the straight and narrow way that leads to noble manhood and useful citizenship.

Two years ago, feeling what a help this influence had been in molding their characters, and realizing the need of a recreation room for the young men of the town, the class organized the Brotherhood Bible Class Club, and rented a club room in the Noel Building, moving a few months later into their present comfortable quarters on Main Street.

There were only eight charter members, and they began with a cash capital of $17, but the scope of the club was soon extended by admitting associate members between the ages of sixteen and thirty-five years, and a month ago honorary membership was added to include men beyond the age limit of the club.

There are now thirty-one members, and the club name has been changed to the Brotherhood Bible Club, which is non-sectarian, and has for its object, in the words of the constitution, "Bible study, Christian culture, social intercourse and aggressive effort to bring adults into the Sunday school and church."

The club quarters consist of an assembly room, comfortably furnished, with a handsome piano, and a reading room, handsomely furnished in mission style, through the generosity of Henry K. McHarg, whose gift of $50 was applied to that end.

The library contains sixty well selected volumes and a dozen of the best magazines and one daily, with club stationery and games of various kinds.

An orchestra, a quartet and chorus adds much to the pleasure of the members, and at their monthly social there is music and refreshments, and the presence of the fair sex to add to their pleasures.

There are also special entertainments of holiday nature and public entertainments for the raising of funds for the extension of the work.

The clubrooms are open from 6 A. M. to 11:30 P. M., and the members are privileged to invite their friends, a half-hour a week being devoted to Bible study.

"The Bulletin of the Brotherhood Bible Club" is a small four-page sheet edited by Miss Tyler and devoted to the interests of the club. Winfred Elmo Winner is business manager. The officers of the club are James Edward Baker, president; John Chapman Turner, vice-president; Winfred Elmo Winner, secretary; Clarence Sidney Hales, treasurer; P. R. N. Carden, librarian, and Miss Sue Hampton Tyler, leader.

Miss Tyler and her band of workers have accomplished much. They hope to accomplish much more in future. A gymnasium and baths are their next aim.
